

Brattleboro School Without Walls

Nothing is Extra-Curricular

Calling all curious, self-directed, motivated high schoolers.

Come live your learning with us!

Do you pursue your passions with joyful intensity? With quiet determination? With your whole heart and mind? Excellent! Come right this way.

Welcome to Brattleboro School Without Walls (BSW²), a community of motivated high schoolers. We are committed to deep, meaningful engagement in school, in all of its possible forms. Here, we believe that your commitment to costume design, your love of touching history through reading primary source documents, your passion for portrait photography, and your drive to prove a Euclidian geometric theorem are all integral parts of your learning.

BSW² learners are curious, self-directed, and able to balance multiple projects and bring them to fruition. We hold each other to high academic standards while honoring each person's unique voice. Come and live your learning at BSW².

INDEPENDENT LEARNING SINCE 1975

Join us for problem-based learning projects and seminar discussions that move academic disciplines from textbooks into the collective human experience.

Academic offerings vary by year based on student need and interest. In general, two classes in each discipline are offered each academic year (Math, Science, English, Social Studies).

The afternoon homework cafe and tutorial blocks are often open. Enrolled students can pursue their interests in this hub of intellectual activity and innovation, as well as work on their three Oak Meadow classes.

Meet BSW² Director and Teacher
Jessica Turner

Jessica earned a BA from Bryn Mawr College and an MA in teaching with a concentration in Montessori adolescent education from Antioch University. She has 19 years of teaching experience at the middle school, high school, and college levels in both public and independent schools. She is also a mentor teacher and education consultant; and a mom, outdoor adventurer, and singer. Jessica is committed to supporting adolescents through meaningful academic engagement and real-world problem solving.
