Table of Contents

Introduction ......................................................................................................................... ix

Unit I Good Citizenship

Lesson 1 Values of Citizenship ............................................................................................ 3
  What Is Civics? ....................................................................................................................... 6
  Qualities of Good Citizenship ................................................................................................. 7
  Being an Informed Citizen ..................................................................................................... 8

Lesson 2 Community Leaders ............................................................................................. 9
  Champions of Freedom .......................................................................................................... 12
  International Cooperation ...................................................................................................... 15
  Community Leaders .............................................................................................................. 15

Lesson 3 Independence and Interdependence .................................................................... 17
  Independence and Interdependence ..................................................................................... 20
  Career Options ...................................................................................................................... 20
  Financial Stability .................................................................................................................. 21

Lesson 4 Decision Making ................................................................................................ 23
  Actions and Consequences .................................................................................................... 25
  Setting Goals ........................................................................................................................ 26
  Making Difficult Decisions ..................................................................................................... 28

Lesson 5/6 Landmark Cases and Civic Debate ................................................................. 29
  Landmark Case: Looking Inside ............................................................................................ 32
  Compare and Evaluate .......................................................................................................... 36
Unit II Building Community

Lesson 7 Immigration and Citizenship .......................................................... 41
- The Nation’s Collage .................................................................................. 44
- Becoming a United States Citizen ............................................................ 44
- Undocumented Immigrants ..................................................................... 46

Lesson 8 Making Connections ..................................................................... 47
- Family Life ............................................................................................... 50
- Relationships and Communication .......................................................... 51

Lesson 9 Disability Awareness .................................................................... 55
- Issues Facing People with Disabilities ..................................................... 58
- Americans with Disabilities Act ............................................................... 59
- Living with a Disability ............................................................................ 60

Lesson 10 Health and Wellness ................................................................. 63
- Personal Health and Wellbeing ............................................................... 65
- Public Health and Safety .......................................................................... 68

Lesson 11/12 Landmark Cases and Civic Debate ....................................... 71
- Landmark Case: Differing Opinions ......................................................... 73
- Weighing Two Sides of an Issue .............................................................. 75

Unit III Foundations of Government

Lesson 13 Government of the People, By the People, For the People ........ 79
- Why Do We Need Government? ............................................................... 82
- Types of Government ............................................................................... 83
- Values and Rules ..................................................................................... 84

Lesson 14 The Political Heritage of the United States of America .......... 87
- The Mayflower Compact ......................................................................... 89
- The Governing Structures of the Early Colonies .................................. 90
- Declaring Independence ......................................................................... 91
- The Continental Congress and Articles of Confederation .................... 92
- The Constitutional Convention .............................................................. 93
Grade 8 Civics Table of Contents

Lesson 15 The U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights
- A Balancing Act ........................................................................................................... 98
- Structuring the New Government with a Great Compromise ........................................ 98
- The United States Constitution .................................................................................. 99
- Amending the Constitution with the Bill of Rights ...................................................... 101

Lesson 16 Separation of Church and State
- Freedom of Religion ..................................................................................................... 108
- Historical Perspective on the Separation of Church and State ..................................... 109
- Clashes between Religion and the Law ........................................................................ 111
- Interpreting Separation of Church and State ............................................................... 112

Lesson 17/18 Landmark Cases and Civic Debate
- Landmark Case: Interpreting the Bill of Rights ......................................................... 117
- Constructing an Argument .......................................................................................... 119

Unit IV Political Systems

Lesson 19 Voting Rights and Responsibilities
- Securing the Right to Vote .......................................................................................... 125
- Amending the Constitution to Extend Voting Rights .................................................... 126
- Women’s Suffrage ...................................................................................................... 128
- Being a Responsible Voter ........................................................................................... 128

Lesson 20 Political Parties
- What Are Political Parties? .......................................................................................... 134
- The Electoral College .................................................................................................. 136
- Benefits and Challenges of the Electoral College ....................................................... 137
- Public Opinion Polls ..................................................................................................... 138

Lesson 21 Checks and Balances
- The Executive Branch: Presidential Power .................................................................... 141
- Executive Departments: The Cabinet .......................................................................... 143
- The Legislative Branch: Making Laws ......................................................................... 145
- Powers of Congress ..................................................................................................... 147
- The Judicial Branch: Interpreting the Constitution .................................................... 148
Lesson 22 State and Local Governments .........................................................151
  Government at the State Level .................................................................153
  State Legislature .......................................................................................156
  Funding State Government ......................................................................157
  Governance of U.S. Territories and District of Columbia ......................157
  Local Governments ..................................................................................158

Lesson 23/24 Landmark Cases and Civic Debate ........................................161
  Landmark Case: Political Debate ..............................................................163
  Debate: Refuting a Claim ..........................................................................164

Unit V Media Influence and News Literacy

Lesson 25 Freedom of Information ..............................................................169
  Freedom of Inquiry and Thought ..............................................................171
  The Internet and the Age of Information ..................................................173
  Fact Versus Opinion ................................................................................175

Lesson 26 The Influence of Advertising ......................................................177
  How Does Advertising Make Up Our Minds for Us? .............................179
  Spending Habits and the Nation’s Economy ..........................................181

Lesson 27 Media Messages and Fake News ...............................................185
  The Bombardment of Media Messages ...................................................186
  Recognizing the Purpose of a News Article ............................................188
  “Real” News and “Fake” News .................................................................191
  Journalism Code of Ethics ......................................................................192

Lesson 28 Positive News ............................................................................195
  News-Worthy Events ................................................................................197
  Sharing Positive News ..............................................................................198

Lesson 29/30 Landmark Cases and Civic Debate .......................................201
  Landmark Case: Impact and Influence ....................................................203
Unit VI Civic Involvement

Lesson 31 Volunteering ..........................................................209
  Duties and Responsibilities of Citizenship ........................................211
  Volunteering in Your Community ................................................213

Lesson 32 Earth Stewardship .........................................................215
  Land Use and the Environment ..................................................217
  Private Property Rights and Public Land Use ..................................219

Lesson 33/34/35 Call to Action: Community Service Project ...............223

Lesson 36 Learning Reflection ...................................................229

Appendix

  Founding Documents of the United States ........................................232
    Declaration of Independence .....................................................232
    Constitution of the United States .................................................236
    Bill of Rights and Constitutional Amendments ...............................246
    The Universal Declaration of Human Rights ...................................255
  Academic Expectations ..........................................................261
  Original Work Guidelines .........................................................261
  Finding Reputable Sources ........................................................262
  Citing Your Sources .............................................................262
  Plagiarism .................................................................264
Lesson 1

Values of Citizenship

Learning Objectives
At the end of this lesson you will be able to:

• Express thoughts and ideas in civil discussion.
• Identify real life examples related to concepts of equality and justice.
• Summarize news articles.

Reading
Read the following sections (found in Reading Selections at the end of this lesson).

• What Is Civics?
• Qualities of Good Citizenship
• Being an Informed Citizen

In each lesson, before you begin reading, glance over the length of the reading selections to get an idea of how much reading is involved. If you find a lot of reading material, you will probably want to read one or two sections and then take a break before reading more. This will help you better understand and remember the material.

In addition to the reading selections in this coursebook, you are encouraged to learn more about topics you are interested in by visiting the library, reading newspapers, and doing research online. You’ll find a list of online resources at www.oakmeadow.com/curriculum-links/. You can use these links to learn more about lesson topics. Your community may also have helpful resources that you can use.

You may find it useful to keep a journal for this course, using it to record your reflections, questions, ideas, and other thoughts about what you are learning. It will also help to practice active reading skills: underline reading passages that you want to remember or go back to, circle or highlight key ideas, define important terms in the margins, write down questions, or underline things.

ASSIGNMENT SUMMARY
☐ Complete reading selections.
☐ Reflect on and discuss issues.
☐ Explain the concept of equality.
☐ Give an example of a conflict of personal freedoms.
☐ Describe an example of justice in action.
☐ Give an example of disrespect or injustice.
☐ Collect and summarize positive news articles.
you want to learn more about. Active reading will help you gain a deeper understanding of the lesson topics and remember and retrieve the information more easily.

Reflect and Discuss

Many communities struggle with unwanted graffiti, which can range from annoying to obscene to evidence of dangerous activity. Graffiti is considered by some to be an art form and those who draw graffiti (“taggers”) are sometimes called “graffiti artists.” Is tagging public property (or the property of others, such as the fence of a business or a train car) ever justified or acceptable? Are there ways that graffiti could contribute to a community in a positive way? Under what circumstances might graffiti be acceptable?

Take some time to reflect on your feelings about this topic, and then find someone—a friend, family member, neighbor, or community member—to discuss it with. Find out what they think and why. Share your thoughts. This is civic debate and rhetoric (the art of persuasive speaking or writing) and it is at the heart of any democracy.

Assignments

Before you begin the first assignment, read through all the assignments. This will help you figure out how to best manage your time. Do this for each lesson. All assignments in this course are done after completing the required reading (listed above).

1. In any society, citizens do not have equal jobs, equal education, equal ability, or equal money. Explain what you think equality means in this country.

2. We have the freedom to play the kind of music that we like. But do we have the freedom to walk down the street playing loud music? We have the freedom to have pets, but do we have the right to allow our animals to roam in other people’s yards? How might your freedom interfere with another person’s freedom? Give at least two specific examples.

3. Define justice in your own words. Describe an example of justice in action in your own life, the life of someone you know, or in the life of a public figure.

4. Do you know of an incident in which a person or group experienced disrespect, injustice, or a lack of freedom? This can be a real example from your life, the life of someone you know, or something you read about or heard on the news. Explain what happened.

5. For two weeks, look for news articles that tell a positive story about a person or event that contributed to our society. Assemble these articles in a collage or little booklet. Next to each article, briefly summarize this “good news.”
Learning Checklist

Use this learning checklist to keep track of how your skills are progressing. Include notes about what you need to work on. Please remember that these skills continue to develop over time, and you aren’t expected to be able to do all of them yet. The main goal is to be aware of which skills you need to focus on.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SKILLS</th>
<th>Developing</th>
<th>Consistent</th>
<th>Competent</th>
<th>Notes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Express thoughts and ideas in civil discussion</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Demonstrate understanding of concepts of equality and justice</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify real life examples related to concepts of equality and justice</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify relevant, accurate news sources</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summarize news articles</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify key ideas in primary and secondary sources</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FOR ENROLLED STUDENTS

You will be sending your work from this lesson to your Oak Meadow teacher at the end of lesson 2. In the meantime, feel free to contact your teacher if you have any questions about the assignments or the submission process.
Reading Selections

What Is Civics?

What is civics? How can the study of civics make a difference in your life?

Civics is the study of what it means to be the citizen of a country. This course focuses on issues of citizenship in the United States of America, but every country in the world has citizens. Citizenship involves several things including individual rights and responsibilities, knowledge of laws and political structures, and being a valuable member of society.

Each of us is a member of many different groups. To begin with, we each belong to a family. You may have several distinct groups of friends, such as those in your neighborhood, in classes you have taken, on sports teams, at a job or through volunteer work, or from other parts of your life. You are also a citizen of your town, your state or region, and your country, and you are an important part of these groups. Each group has its own rights, responsibilities, values, and expectations.

In the United States—and in many other countries around the world—the belief that all people deserve equal respect is supported by three basic values: equality, freedom, and justice. These values establish a common bond between people who belong to many different ethnic, religious, and social groups.

- Equality means that every person is entitled to the same respect as any other person. Everyone has something to contribute to our society. To be able to make this contribution, each person must have the same rights and opportunities in life as any other person, even when their individual circumstances are entirely different.

- Freedom is the ability to choose how to act, what to say, and what to think. This means that each person has the liberty to decide what to believe, who to associate with, and where to live, work, or travel.

- Justice means that each person will be treated fairly in every area of life. The laws and rules are applied equally to everyone. Justice also ensures that citizens’ rights are protected under law.

There are many famous songs and poems that tell of these basic values of citizenship. Think about where you might have heard some of these phrases before, and see if you can think of others:

- let freedom ring
- with liberty and justice for all
- sweet land of liberty
- all men are created equal
- the land of the free
Qualities of Good Citizenship

Participation is at the heart of the form of government we have in the United States. Being a good citizen takes time and energy, but it is important for every American to understand how our government works and what part we can and should play in it. There are duties and responsibilities of citizenship. (A duty is something that is required or expected of you; a responsibility is an inner sense of a moral obligation.) For instance, it is every citizen’s duty to know and obey the law, and to cooperate with emergency workers. It is every citizen’s responsibility to investigate issues that impact the community, and to become an informed voter and participate in the voting process. Every person makes a difference in the local community.

There are many qualities related to good citizenship. Respect for people, laws, and public property or the property of others is one important quality. This means being honest and considerate when dealing with others. Compassion for others is how we care for one another and helps us connect with other people on an emotional level. Good citizenship also includes being willing to do the right thing and to stand up to injustice with courage. It is important for each of us to take responsibility for our actions (and the consequences of our actions) and to take responsibility for our communities. Everyone needs to contribute for a society to thrive. For instance, some people might take care of the environment and public spaces while others might volunteer at community events.

No society is perfect, and newspapers remind us daily of the flaws in the modern world. However, there are many good citizens in every country and many positive events that happen every day.
Being an Informed Citizen

Part of being a good citizen is being informed. This doesn’t mean we have to listen to, read, or watch the news all the time. It means it is each person’s responsibility to understand and respect the laws, rules, and regulations that help ensure a civil society. The word civil refers to anything involving ordinary citizens; it also means courteous and polite. In a civil society, laws are designed to create harmony, and keep everyone safe and healthy. For instance, traffic laws help avoid arguments, confusion, and accidents on the road, and it is the responsibility of each licensed driver to learn and follow these laws.

Being informed also means taking an interest in what is happening in the community and beyond. We need to pay attention to all sides of an issue, consider different perspectives, and make up our own minds. Being informed means gathering information from as many sources as necessary in order to fully understand an issue, event, or idea.

In gathering information, it is important to look to primary sources as well as secondary sources.

- A primary source is a firsthand account of an event or situation (such as an interview or personal conversation between two people), or an original document (such as a letter or diary).
- A secondary source is an indirect source, a second-hand or third-hand account of an event or situation, such as the encyclopedia, newspaper, magazines, etc. A second-hand account is a report by someone who was given the information by the individual who experienced the event. News reporters often give second-hand accounts of events.
- A third-hand account is removed one step further, such as when someone writes an article based on a news report of an event.

Have you ever played the game Telephone? One person whispers a message to someone else, and that person whispers the message to a third person, and so on, until the message is passed down the line of people. By the time the message gets to the last person, it is usually very different than when it started! Whenever you read or hear news, consider how close to the source the information originated. In general, the closer to the original source, the more accurate the information is likely to be.
Lesson 2
Community Leaders

Learning Objectives
At the end of this lesson you will be able to:
• Identify needs of community members.
• Describe civic work done by international groups and individuals.
• Conduct and summarize an interview.

Reading
Read the following sections (found in Reading Selections at the end of this lesson).
• Champions of Freedom
• International Cooperation
• Community Leaders

Assignments
1. This week, try to do at least two things to be a good citizen of your neighborhood. Here is a list of some things you might do, or you can come up with your own ideas:
   • Take a neighbor a gift of flowers you picked or food you prepared.
   • Help your neighbors do yard work.
   • Run an errand for a neighbor.
   • Visit an elderly neighbor who lives alone and might enjoy company.
   • Clean up around your neighborhood to make it look better.
   • Offer to help a mother with young children with childcare, chores, or errands.
   • Organize a potluck or neighborhood block party.

ASSIGNMENT SUMMARY
☐ Complete reading selections.
☐ Perform helpful tasks in your neighborhood and write about it.
☐ Choose an activity to complete.
☐ Interview a first responder.
☐ Complete your collage or booklet of positive news articles.
• With your parents, check the listings on Freecycle.org, an online forum for people to exchange things for free, and see if you have something to give away to someone who needs it.

Afterward, write down what you did. How did you feel after being a good neighbor? What was your neighbor’s response? How can you continue to be a good neighbor? Write down your thoughts.

2. Choose one of the following activities.
   a. Read the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (found in the appendix). Draw a poster or create a picture that celebrates this vital document.
   b. Choose one of the agencies of the United Nations to learn more about. Give a summary of what the agency does and who benefits.
   c. Choose one of the “champions of freedom” mentioned in the reading selection, or someone else in whom you have an interest, and learn about their life’s work. Describe some of the person’s most significant contributions to humanity.

3. Interview a local firefighter, police officer, or EMT or paramedic. Ask questions such as the following (feel free to come up with more questions of your own):
   • What are the requirements for your job? What was the training like?
   • What do you do in a typical workday?
   • What is one of the hardest parts of your job?
   • What is the most rewarding part?
   • Why did you choose this career? What other careers did you consider? Would you make the same career choice again?

Write a summary of the interview, making sure to give the person’s full name and job title. Alternately, you might like to record the interview on video and then edit it down to show the highlights of what you talked about.

4. Continue to collect positive news articles. Summarize each one and add it to your collage or booklet. Complete this project by the end of the week.
Up for a Challenge?

Have you ever seen a Little Free Library? These small structures are popping up in neighborhoods all around the country. Learn about how to construct one of your own and find books to stock it with that anyone is welcome to take and keep or read and return. If you don’t have a place to put up a Little Free Library, you can still build one and then offer it to anyone who wants one.

Learning Checklist

Use this learning checklist to keep track of how your skills are progressing. Include notes about what you need to work on. These skills will continue to develop over time.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SKILLS</th>
<th>Developing</th>
<th>Consistent</th>
<th>Competent</th>
<th>Notes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Identify needs of community members</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Conduct an interview</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summarize an interview</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summarize news articles</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify key ideas in primary and secondary sources</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FOR ENROLLED STUDENTS

When you have completed this lesson, please send lessons 1 and 2 to your Oak Meadow teacher. Make sure to include your collage or booklet of positive news. Include any additional notes about the lesson work or anything you’d like your teacher to know. Feel free to include any questions you have—your teacher is eager to help.

If you have any questions about what to send or how to send it, please refer to your parent handbook and your teacher’s welcome letter. Your teacher will respond to your submission of student work with detailed feedback. In the meantime, proceed to the next lesson.
Reading Selections

Champions of Freedom

The right to be free is one of the most cherished human rights. While millions of people work hard to ensure a free and just society, most are not well known. Regardless of that, they are champions of freedom. They may not need public acclaim or fame—many don’t even want it. However, their work is valued and appreciated.

There are others who have become famous for their work for the good of humanity. Here are just a few of these people:

- Franklin D. Roosevelt and Eleanor Roosevelt

  Franklin D. Roosevelt, U.S. President from 1933–45, once said, “Freedom from war is ideally linked with freedom from want.” Both Franklin and his wife, Eleanor, were tireless champions of his dream of “peace and a more abundant life for the peoples of the world.” Eleanor Roosevelt became one of the world’s foremost advocates for human rights, often focusing on poverty, racism, and issues affecting children and women. She chaired the United Nation’s Human Rights Commission, where she helped write the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.
• Dr. Linus Pauling and Ava Helen Pauling

Dr. Linus Pauling was a scientist who won the Nobel Prize in Chemistry in 1954 and then won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1962 for his exemplary work as a peace activist. He filed suit against the U.S. Department of Defense, the Atomic Energy Commission, and their counterparts, to protest their right to conduct nuclear bomb tests. Dr. Pauling believed that the way to avert nuclear war was to begin making safe, just, and effective international agreements, and that the first of these should involve the ending of all nuclear weapons tests. When accepting the Nobel Peace Prize, Pauling credited the influence of his wife, Ava Helen Pauling, who was a prominent human rights advocate. She was involved in social action and lectured around the world on women’s rights, racial equality, and world peace.

• Martin Luther King, Jr. and Coretta Scott King

Martin Luther King, Jr. was another tireless champion of freedom, leading the civil rights movement during the 1960s with peace and dignity. He advocated nonviolent social action and inspired generations of people across all racial, ethnic, and economic backgrounds to work together for racial equality. For his extraordinary work, King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964. Coretta Scott King worked with her husband throughout his career until his assassination in 1968. After his death, she founded the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change and continued her work with social activism for peace and justice.
• Nelson Mandela

Nelson Mandela was the first democratically-elected president of South Africa, serving from 1994 to 1999. Growing up under white minority rule in South Africa, Mandela devoted his life to the fight for freedom for all Africans. While still in law school, he joined a civil disobedience campaign against unjust laws and was arrested. Despite several arrests, he remained determined to speak up. He continued his involvement in protests and strikes, working toward a non-racial constitution for racially segregated South Africa. In a speech in 1964, he said, “I have cherished the ideal of a democratic and free society in which all persons live together in harmony and with equal opportunities.”
International Cooperation

The United Nations was formed in 1945 to promote peaceful relationships among nations of the world. It has over 190 Member States who work together to address issues affecting humanity, such as international peace and security, climate change, sustainable development, gender equality, food and water sources, and human rights. They are also instrumental in delivering humanitarian aid, such as delivering food, water, and medical supplies to countries suffering from drought, natural disasters, or war. The United Nations (U.N.) has a variety of agencies that address these issues. Here are just a few of the U.N. groups:

- The United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) provides assistance to families with children.
- The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees works to protect and provide aid to refugees.
- The World Food Programme’s goal is to eliminate hunger and malnutrition in the world.
- The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) advocates for the sustainable development of Earth’s resources.
- UN Women works at achieving gender equality and empowering women.
- The World Health Organization (WHO) advocates for public health, which it defines as “complete physical, mental, and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.”

Community Leaders

Every community has its own local champions, people who work for the good of the community. For instance, your local fire department helps keep the community safe, and is ready to help in any emergency. Likewise, police officers—also called Peace Officers—work to ensure the harmony and safety of the communities they serve. Their job includes protecting people’s lives and property, patrolling neighborhoods, finding stolen property, finding and arresting lawbreakers, enforcing traffic laws, mediating disputes, and helping to maintain peace and order in the community.

Many other people work for peace, justice, and other humanitarian causes. Most communities have a variety of programs designed to enhance and expand opportunities for their citizens. For instance, the Civil Air Patrol (CAP) trains young people for search and rescue operations in emergencies. Literacy programs are aimed at teaching adults to read, write, and speak in English. The Special Olympics is an organization that arranges athletic events for children and adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Many communities also have special programs for senior citizens, people who are homeless, or others in need.
Lesson 5/6
Landmark Cases and Civic Debate

Learning Objectives
At the end of this lesson you will be able to:

- Identify key aspects of a court case.
- Compare the merits of opposing sides of an issue.
- Express or interpret a political or social stance in artistic form.

At the end of each unit, you will have the opportunity to read about an actual case that was decided by the United States Supreme Court, the highest and most influential court in the nation. Important cases that come before the Supreme Court are often called landmark cases because they have a powerful impact on society, and they inform and influence other court cases for decades afterward.

You will also have a chance to examine an important civic issue. You will look at the issue from the perspective of a concerned citizen, researching both sides and forming an opinion on the topic. Look over the entire lesson before you begin so you can get a sense of what you will be doing.

ASSIGNMENT SUMMARY

- Learn about a landmark court case.
- Define unknown legal terms.
- Complete “Landmark Case: Looking Inside.”
- Write a summary of the court’s decision and your opinion of it.
- Give an opinion on a controversial issue.
- Complete “Compare and Evaluate.”
- Locate or create an artistic commentary on a social or political issue.
Landmark Supreme Court Cases

Read through the following list of cases that were decided by the United States Supreme Court. After the name of the case, you will see the year the case was decided by the court and how the Supreme Court justices (judges) voted. A 5–4 decision means that 5 justices voted in favor of the case and 4 justices voted against it.

• Plessy v. Ferguson (1896) (7–1 decision for Ferguson) Racial segregation is allowed in “separate but equal” public facilities

• Chaplinsky v. New Hampshire (1942) (9–0 decision for New Hampshire) Freedom of Speech (the 1st Amendment) does not protect “fighting words” that can provoke violence or cause an immediate breach of the peace.

• Brown v. Board of Education (1954) (9–0 decision for Brown) Racial segregation of schools is ruled unconstitutional.

You will choose one of these cases to learn more about. There are many technical and legal terms used in court cases. But before you begin your research, familiarize yourself with the glossary of legal terms. As you read cases and do research, you are likely to find other terms you don’t know. Look up the definitions and then add them to this glossary.

---

Glossary of Legal Terms

Appeal: Request that a court decision be reviewed and reversed.

Arguments: information given by each side to prove their case and convince the court to rule in their favor.

Claims: statements made as fact, which will have to be proven through reasoning and evidence.

Decision: the court’s ruling on the case; most rulings have some justices voting for and some against; some decisions are unanimous, which means that all justices agree.

Defendant (or Respondent): the person or group against whom the complaint is made (and lawsuit is filed) or who is involved in the petition and called upon to defend or justify the actions that were taken.

Dissenting opinion: a vote or opinion that is not in agreement with the majority of the justices.

Et al.: abbreviation for “and others;” used to indicate other people are part of the group but not mentioned by name.
Landmark Case Assignments

1. Choose a case and read a summary. You can easily find these online or in a library. Check the Curriculum Resource Links for this course at www.oakmeadow.com/curriculum-links/.

These cases may be challenging to read, not just because of the subject matter but because highly educated adults are writing them for an adult audience. You aren’t expected to understand everything you read. However, you should be able to understand enough to answer the questions below. If you have trouble understanding the case you have found, you might ask an adult to help explain it. Uscourts.gov is an excellent place to gain a general understanding of a topic. You can find basic explanations of each of these cases on numerous other sources as well. (See www.oakmeadow.com/curriculum-links/ for more ideas.)

2. As you read, make a list of words and phrases you don’t understand. Find out the definitions and add them to the glossary of legal terms.

3. Once you have read a summary of the case and the decision, complete “Landmark Case: Looking Inside” (on the next page). Answer the questions in your own words. The information you need is often included in the summary but if not, you will have to do more research to find out how the lawyers for each side presented their case.

4. Write a brief summary of the decision and your opinion about it. If possible, include one direct quote from the decision in your explanation. Make sure to put the quote in quotation marks and specify who said or wrote it. Usually one justice will write an explanation of the majority opinion and one will write an explanation of the minority or dissenting opinion.
LANDMARK CASE
LOOKING INSIDE

Plaintiff: ___________________________  Defendant/Respondent: ___________________________

Case background:

What is the plaintiff arguing for or against?

Give one reason supporting the plaintiff’s claim.

How did the defendant respond to the claim?

Give one reason supporting the defendant’s response.
Civic Debate

Important issues are debated every day in towns and cities all around the world. Sometimes issues are decided by a small committee or town representatives, and other times the issues are brought to the general public in a statewide or national vote.

When an issue comes before a group of people, they must first clarify what the issue involves. This can be done by making a statement, such as “The legal driving age should be raised to 18 years old.” Creating a specific statement is essential. For instance, it is not enough to say “School shootings should be stopped.” This is a statement everyone can agree with. The real question is what to do about it. If the issue is not whether school shootings should be allowed or not (everyone agrees they should not be allowed), what is the issue? This needs to be clarified. For instance, it might be phrased as “States should ban automatic assault rifles” or “Schools should install metal detectors to keep people from carrying guns into school.”

Once a statement or claim is made, the group can discuss their opinions and debate what effects or consequences might arise if the claim is made into a rule, regulation, or law. To make the debate more focused, the issue is often phrased as a YES/NO question that people can vote on.

In order to be fair to everyone involved, the group must make every effort to see the issue from many different perspectives. This helps ensure that the viewpoints and needs of all citizens are represented in the debate.

Let’s look at an example of how a group might tackle a difficult issue.

Identify the issue: A town library is requesting additional funds to develop programs to support the library users who are homeless.

Form the issue as a YES/NO question: Should the town fund library programs aimed at supporting patrons who are homeless?

Background of the case: In order to learn more about the issue, a librarian is invited to a meeting of the town council to explain the problem from her perspective. She states,

“At our library, the staff are taking a course in how to deal with homeless patrons. We have many homeless people that spend all day at the library, from when we open at 9:00 a.m. to when we close at 9:00 p.m. They only leave to go to the community kitchen for meals. Those with substance abuse problems will leave for brief periods to smoke, drink, or do drugs. Drunken people are the biggest problem. The smell in some of our rooms is like a bar at quitting time. It’s quite sad that there are no services for them during the day to guide them to health. We have a community problem that can only be solved through the generosity of the citizens.

“In our town, there are no services for these people except homeless shelters, which close during the day, and the community kitchen, which is only open for meals. I read that an Oakland, California library has a social worker on duty full time and volunteers are also on hand to guide homeless people to resources. In Santa Cruz, California, librarians have arranged for tutors to help patrons with creating resumes and job searches, which can help them find gainful employment, so they can afford a place to live. The librarians also connect patrons with other social services that may provide support. This issue is also being addressed in Boston and many other cities. Our community needs to figure out how to do our part in finding solutions to this problem.”

A spokesperson for a group of concerned citizens is invited to present their perspective on the issue:

“A library should be a safe and comfortable place for all patrons. Homeless people have begun loitering around the library building, sometimes blocking steps and entrances as they sit surrounded by their belongings. We are sympathetic to the problems facing the homeless population. The city has already committed funds to various social service agencies that support people who are homeless. This is the responsibility of each community and our community is already doing this.

“The library, however, should focus its resources and funds on programs that will benefit the majority of patrons, not just a small group of disadvantaged individuals. If programs aimed at homeless people are expanded, more homeless people will come to the library, making it harder and harder for others to feel comfortable there. Homelessness is a community problem but it’s not a library problem.”

Weigh both sides of the issue: Once both sides have been heard, the next step is to clarify the claims each is making and to look at the reasoning and evidence behind each claim.

- Claim by Librarians: The library needs more money for staff and resources to offer services to people who are homeless.
  - Reasoning: Helping this at-risk group will help the entire community.
  - Evidence: Helping people with computer access, technology skills, resumes, etc. will help them find work, get off the streets, and return to being productive members of the community.

- Claim by Community Group: The library should spend funds to improve programs that will benefit the majority of library users, not just one small group.
  - Reasoning: The library’s first priority is to provide a safe, welcoming place for the general public.
  - Evidence: Providing services for the homeless population will encourage more homeless to congregate around the library building, which can lead to issues regarding health and safety.

After weighing the claims, reasoning, and evidence, the issue is put to a vote. Once the vote is decided, there may be more discussions, debates, and research as the group looks for practical solutions to solve the problem or carry out the ruling.
Civic Debate Assignments

1. Now it is your turn to make your voice heard on an issue! Here is a list of controversial issues. Some you might already be aware of; others might be new to you. All are issues being debated, discussed, argued over, and, sometimes, put to a vote. One day, you might be called on to help decide laws related to these issues. Give some thought to each topic and then choose one to focus on in this lesson (you’ll have a chance to explore other issues on the list in other lessons).

Issues for debate:

• NFL football players kneeling in protest during the national anthem
• a cell phone company plans to build a tower near a popular scenic mountain resort
• expanding right to die or physician aid in dying (PAD) laws to more states
• abolishing daylight savings time
• oil pipeline projects and protests (in the Dakotas and elsewhere)
• using tigers, elephants, and other wild animals in circus acts
• juveniles accused of a crime being tried as adults
• statewide bans on smoking in public places
• animals used in science experiments or testing
• young men but not young women are required to register for selective service

Conduct some basic research into the issue and summarize your findings. You don’t have to write a long report or do hours of research; just consult two or three sources to get a general idea of the concerns and opinions involved on both sides of the issue. Make a note of your sources and include them when you share your work with your teacher. Citing your source makes it easy to refer back to the original information, if necessary.

2. Imagine this issue is brought to your town council for a vote. Complete “Compare and Evaluate” (on the next page). The first thing to do is to form the issue as a YES/NO question. Using the first topic in the list as an example, the issue might be formed in several different ways:

• “Should football players be allowed to kneel in protest of racial discrimination during the national anthem?”
• “Should NFL football players be penalized for kneeling during the national anthem?”
• “Should peaceful political protests be allowed by professional athletes at a nationally televised game?”

For the first and third example, a YES vote would be in favor of the kneeling players, and for the second question, a YES vote would penalize the players.
3. Political cartoons, advertisements, paintings, songs, and other styles of art are commonly used as political commentary. Try to find a piece of art that expresses issues related to the topic you’ve chosen or another current social or political issue. Write a brief explanation of what the art portrays and give credit to the source. Alternately, you might create a piece of art to express your views on an issue.
Learning Checklist

Use this learning checklist to track how your skills are developing over time and identify skills that need more work.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SKILLS</th>
<th>Developing</th>
<th>Consistent</th>
<th>Competent</th>
<th>Notes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Locate primary source material</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify key aspects of a court case</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summarize a court decision</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cite direct quotations in a relevant context</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Express an opinion on a court case</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Research facts and perspectives related to an issue</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Compare the merits of opposing sides of an issue</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Express or interpret a political or social stance in artistic form</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FOR ENROLLED STUDENTS

When you have completed your work from this lesson, please share it with your Oak Meadow teacher. If you have difficulty understanding any of the concepts in your landmark case or civic issue, let your teacher know before submitting your work or send a note with your submission.

Please remember to update your teacher on your progress with your person goal (from lesson 4).
Lesson 7

Immigration and Citizenship

Learning Objectives

At the end of this lesson you will be able to:

• Cite a source using MLA citation format.
• Use data to create a graph.
• Identify cultural influences on a family or community.

Reading

Read the following sections (found in Reading Selections at the end of this lesson).

• The Nation’s Collage
• Becoming a United States Citizen
• Undocumented Immigrants

Reflect and Discuss

Immigration laws are often in the news and you may have heard people expressing opinions on both sides of the issue. What is your understanding of the issue? Talk to other people and find out what they know or think. Look for current news articles about the issue. Discuss what you find. Remember that each person who comes to this country, either with documentation or without, is an individual with a unique history and life circumstances. If you know someone who has emigrated from their home country, you might want to have a conversation about what brought them here.

Assignments

1. Choose one of these research assignments. Cite your source(s) in MLA format (see the appendix for details):

ASSIGNMENT SUMMARY

☐ Complete reading selections.
☐ Reflect on and discuss lesson topics.
☐ Choose a research assignment related to immigration.
☐ Draw a graph related to immigration.
☐ Choose an assignment about cultural influences.
Lesson 7: Immigration and Citizenship

a. Read the U.S. Oath of Allegiance, find out what it means, and rewrite it in your own words. Cite your source.

b. Research a first-hand account (primary source) of an undocumented immigrant. What caused them to leave their country and move to the U.S.? What were some of the hardships of getting here? Cite your source.

c. Research the efforts of the USCIS to stop the flow of illegal immigration into the United States. Cite at least one recent example of the USCIS or Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) in action. Cite your sources.

2. Draw a graph that shows some aspect of U.S. immigration. You may draw the graph by hand or use a computer. Your graph should include an informative title, and labeled axes (including units of measure) for line and bar graphs, or a key for a pie/circle chart.

You will need to find reliable data on your topic before creating the graph. For instance, you might draw a map or bar graph showing the U.S. states with the highest percentage of immigrants, or you might draw a pie chart showing the countries of origin for U.S. immigrants in 1900 compared to 2000. Your graph must be original, not simply a copy of a graph you found elsewhere. If the data you are using is already in graph form, present it in another way. For example, if the data is in a pie chart or a line graph, draw it in bar graph form.

Differences in population data can be shown as larger or smaller human forms, or one human form can represent 100,000 people. You can be creative with graphing your data, as long as the information is clearly presented. The idea is for you to create your own graph using data you have found. Cite the source of your data using the MLA format and be sure to label and title your graph to make it clear what the data is showing.

If you don’t have much experience in creating graphs, take some time to learn this important skill. There are many good videos and how-to articles, and you can learn a lot by just paying attention to graphs you notice around you all the time: in news articles, educational videos, advertisements, and informational posters and pamphlets. Check out the resources on the Curriculum Resource Links page for this course.

3. Choose one of the following assignments:

a. From what countries do your ancestors come? How (and why) did your family get established in this country? What cultural traditions did they bring with them? Talk to your parents or older relatives to find out more about your family’s immigrant story.

b. Write a few paragraphs about the major cultural groups that settled your state or county. Include information about what occupations they had, what special crafts or skills they brought with them, and how they influenced the traditions, food, language (look at town names, for instance), and other aspects of your state.
Up for a Challenge?

Read one of the following books (check your local library):

- Crossing the Wire by Will Hobbs

  This fictional account of a 15-year-old boy who illegally crosses the border from Mexico to the U.S. highlights the dangers and hardships of the trip, and the boy’s determination. Details of Mexican culture and the mountainous desert terrain make this an engaging, realistic story that introduces a serious, complicated issue in modern politics and society.

- The Arrival by Shaun Tan

  A story told in beautifully-detailed illustrations, The Arrival follows a man leaving his home country and arriving in the United States. The challenges he is faced with give a picture of not only his journey but that of many others who make up the society of his new home.

Learning Checklist

Use this learning checklist to track how your skills are developing over time and identify skills that need more work.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SKILLS</th>
<th>Developing</th>
<th>Consistent</th>
<th>Competent</th>
<th>Notes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Identify relevant, reliable sources for researching a topic</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cite data sources in MLA format</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Use data to create a graph</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Label a graph to clarify what it is communicating</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Identify cultural influences on a family or community</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FOR ENROLLED STUDENTS

Contact your teacher if you have any questions about the material. You will submit your work after the next lesson.
Reading Selections

The Nation’s Collage

The United States of America is a mosaic or collage of many nationalities. Most American citizens are immigrants or descendants of immigrants. Many citizens are a blend of ethnic and national backgrounds which includes at least several different countries and cultures. This is part of what makes this nation unique and vibrant.

When people leave their country or territory to settle in another area, they are called emigrants. When they move into a country or territory from another area, they are called immigrants.

Increasingly, nations around the world are gaining immigrant populations, which bring a lively infusion of new ideas and traditions as well as challenges in housing, feeding, and providing jobs and services for an increasing number of people.

In the early days of the United States, communities struggled to survive, and desperately needed more people. There were no real rules about who could come to this country, and immigrants of all kinds were welcomed. Until the 1880s, there was an “open shore” policy which allowed nearly unlimited immigration, barring only people with certain diseases or criminal records.

This open-armed welcome was not always reflected in the experiences of those newly arrived, who sometimes found themselves surrounded by prejudice and discrimination.

However, for the most part, immigrants found work, places to live, and became assimilated (integrated or blended) into the community.

Each state in the United States has a history of migration of different groups of human beings at different times. Each time a different group of people settled in an area, they influenced the culture. They contributed their skills, customs, character, language, and way of life. In many areas of the United States, the style and traditions of daily life still contain remnants of the different cultures of the people who settled there so long ago. Our national culture is a wonderful blend of the cultures of all the groups who have made their home here.

Becoming a United States Citizen

There are several ways to become a United States citizen. If you are born in the United States, or in any U.S. territory (such as Guam or Puerto Rico), you are considered a native-born citizen, unless your parents are in the United States working for a foreign government and are under the authority of that government. Also, if one or both of your parents is a U.S. citizen, you are a citizen by birth even if you were born outside of the United States.
You can also become a U.S. citizen by a special process called naturalization. If you are under eighteen when your parents become naturalized citizens, you automatically become a citizen as well. Adults may qualify for naturalization if they have lived in this country for five years (or three years if married to a U.S. citizen). Those applying for naturalization must submit a variety of documents and be fingerprinted for a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) criminal background check. Next, applicants will go through an interview process that usually includes English and civics tests. If accepted, applicants are required to take the Oath of Allegiance.

The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) provides a pamphlet titled “10 Steps to Naturalization.” In it, the rights and responsibilities of citizens are described.

Understanding U.S. citizenship

Citizenship is the common thread that connects all Americans. Below is a list of some of the most important rights and responsibilities that all citizens—both Americans by birth and by choice—should exercise, honor, and respect. While some of these responsibilities are legally required of every citizen, all are important to ensure the continued vitality of our country and democracy.

Rights

- Freedom to express yourself.
- Freedom to worship as you wish.
- Right to a prompt, fair trial by jury.
- Right to vote in elections for public officials.
- Right to apply for federal employment requiring U.S. citizenship.
- Right to run for elected office.
- Freedom to pursue “life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.”

Responsibilities

- Support and defend the U.S. Constitution.
- Stay informed of the issues affecting your community.
- Participate in the democratic process.
• Respect and obey federal, state, and local laws.
• Respect the rights, beliefs, and opinions of others.
• Participate in your local community.
• Pay income and other taxes honestly, and on time, to federal, state, and local authorities.
• Serve on a jury when called upon.
• Defend the country if the need should arise.

Some people choose dual citizenship, or to retain citizenship of two countries at the same time. There are benefits and drawbacks to dual citizenship, and each country has its own regulations about it.

Undocumented Immigrants
There are many people who live in the United States but are not U.S. citizens. Some are here for extended visits or travel, to work, or to study, and have documentation showing they are in the country legally. Some obtain a Permanent Resident Card (called a Green Card) which allows them to be in the country long-term.

While many non-citizens living in the U.S. are here with proper documentation, many others come to this country and live here as undocumented immigrants. Terms such as illegal immigrant and illegal alien refer to someone in this country without legal documentation. In the U.S., many unauthorized immigrants come from Mexico and countries in Central America. They come looking for a better life. Many are fleeing serious poverty or dangerous situations. Because they are in the United States illegally, they risk being caught by immigration officials and deported (sent back to their own country). Most immigrants work one or more jobs, save money to support family in the U.S. and elsewhere, rent or purchase homes, run businesses, and contribute to society exactly as a natural-born or naturalized citizen.

Everyone, regardless of citizenship or legal status, must follow the laws of this country and is entitled to many of the same rights and protections. Police, fire, and emergency medical services, for example, are rendered to anyone in need, regardless of status.